Hong Kong

International

• Non-residents are not permitted to enter Hong Kong.
• Travellers are allowed to connect through Hong Kong International Airport provided they are checked through to their final destination.
• International travellers are not expected to be allowed entry until 18 September.
• The Special Administrative Region has extended mandatory quarantine restrictions for incoming travellers from Macau, Taiwan, and mainland China, until 7 September, the only areas Hong Kong is currently permitting entry from.
• The Hong Kong government is requiring travellers from certain high-risk countries to obtain a negative result from a COVID-19 test before arriving in Hong Kong, if present in the 14-days prior. The first set of countries to be labelled as ‘high-risk’ are: Bangladesh, India, Indonesia, Nepal, Pakistan, Philippines, the U.S., and South Africa. The test result should not be more than three days (72-hours) old. Travellers from these countries will also need to present proof of a hotel booking for 14 days to undergo their quarantine. Transit passengers are exempt from these measures.
• Restrictions also apply on cross border travel with mainland China and Macau. However, Hong Kong enterprises with cross-border operations in mainland China are now eligible to apply for an exemption from the usual compulsory quarantine requirements. Qualification criteria is set by the Hong Kong Trade and Industry Department; the expanded quarantine exemption will run alongside the quarantine process.
• Meanwhile, an exemption now exists for executives at the top 480 companies listed on the Hong Kong stock exchange. Two directors or executives per company will be eligible to travel from mainland China to Hong Kong every month for “essential business activities” such as board meetings, seeing clients, and signing documents. Executives arriving in Hong Kong from mainland China will be exempt from the city’s mandatory two-week quarantine. Yet Hong Kong executives must still undergo quarantine upon reaching the mainland, though the Hong Kong government is working with authorities there to remove this requirement by way of predeparture COVID-19 testing.
• All inbound travellers from all flights to Hong Kong are required to take a shuttle bus from Hong Kong International Airport immediately to the temporary specimen collection centre at AsiaWorld-Expo to collect deep throat saliva samples and submit the samples at the venue for conducting COVID-19 test.
