

Studying at a university of applied sciences means building up your professional network from day one. HZ combines theoretical knowledge with company-based assignments: students interact with experts from the professional field during guest lectures and company visits, carry out real-life projects and have two semesters of internship.

ALWAYS AT THE TOP

Since 2011, so nine years in a row, the Dutch Guide to Higher Education, has ranked HZ in the top 3 of medium-sized Dutch universities of Applied Sciences.

EXCELLENT CAREER PROSPECTS

Job prospects are very promising. While 28% of HZ graduates continue with a Master programme, 67,4% find a job upon graduation.*

'I WORKED FOR SEVERAL INTERNATIONAL AND MULTINATIONAL COMPANIES'

'During the first study year I had the opportunity to work for several international and multinational companies. This greatly enhanced my insight in the different fields of logistics, such as transportation, production planning and organisation management. During the first year we are encouraged to find out in which logistics field we would like to work. The experience and knowledge I gained so far taught me how to make warehouse and production improvements for a company. The study offers many challenges as we constantly have to apply the theory into practice, but the support of my teachers and fellow students help me to complete all my tasks on time. I'm sure the varied experiences will be of enormous value to my profession. Moreover, the network I'm currently building up will surely create plenty of opportunities for my future career.'
