Malongo Coffee

Established in 1934 in Nice, France, Malongo is committed to reaching the highest quality of coffee by carefully tracking the beans from the plantation to the cup. Malongo's Arabica coffee only grows at high altitudes using traditional farming methods. The beans are then hand-picked, naturally dried and then carefully roasted for over twenty minutes to bring out the true finesse of the aromas.

From farm to production process, Malongo has a long healthy relationship with all parties involved which is why they are able to obtain a consistent and high quality coffee for over 80 years.

Malongo has been a pioneer of Fairtrade labeling since the 1990's. Respecting the people involved in the production process is at the heart of Malongo's mission. Setting up healthy and tight relationships, enables Malongo to obtain a consistently high quality coffee. Incentives, fair pay and social development are keywords that define Malongo.

Magnum Ground “drip” Coffee

Thanks to slow roasting using traditional methods, this blend of 8 high-altitude 100% Arabica coffee reflects supreme quality. It’s the slow roasting method that allows the flavor and aroma bringing out the best in the bean. The coffee is immediately dry vacuum packed in sachets preventing oxidation & rancidity with optimised aroma.

France-vs-Italy : The Culture of Espresso and Machine Calibration

The volume of an espresso is something that varies, according to taste and culture. In France, for example people consider a single espresso what in Italy is a “lungo” (long espresso).

However, the usual standard volume of a single espresso is considered to be about 30ml (1 fluid ounce); a ristretto would be as low as 20ml, and a lungo about 40ml. The ultimate decision about volume has to be made by the client, who can precisely set the volume of the espresso that he/she pleases, during the installation of the machine with the technician.
