This year has been filled with a multitude of both challenges and victories. Every year is different but in 2020 we have had to deal with more change than normal. The business world is evolving quickly, and risk management has been changing along with it. In 2021, a resilient and resourceful approach to risk management will be front and center as businesses navigate the “work from home” landscape, deal with the effects of the pandemic, and change the insurance market for years to come.

The ALS Group's Managing Principal, Albert Sica, and Director of Risk Management, Heidi Much, collaborated on this list of the most pressing risks a business could face in 2021.

Let us know how we can help you identify the risks in your path, and approach 2021 with a “wide angle” perspective so the company’s risk management strategy can support the business’ strategic objectives.
