

Thousands of Households Face
Eviction Everyday.

Reach More of Them with the Assistance They Need.

UrbanFootprint can help.

Rental assistance can make all the difference to families facing forced displacement. But many are unaware of aid and often missed by traditional outreach efforts.

Close the gap between assistance and need.

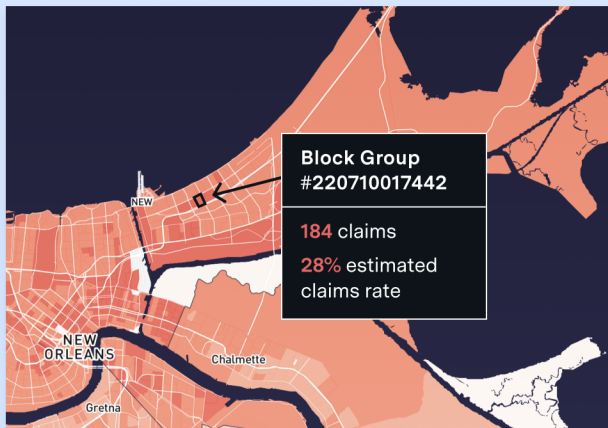

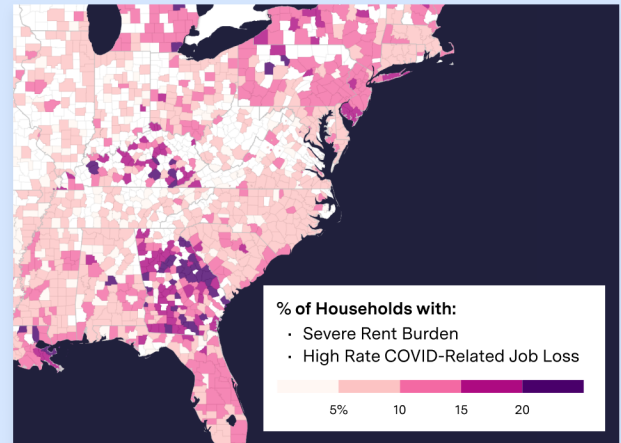

UrbanFootprint Eviction Risk Insights dynamically unifies, analyzes, and maps previously isolated datasets — including key demographic variables — for any area in the U.S. It gives you a clear picture of the most current conditions around eviction risk, locating not only the lowest-income and hardest-to-reach households, but also quantifying how many are currently at risk of displacement. Knowing exactly where and how big the problem is means you can design outreach programs with greater precision and relevance... and help minimize eviction.

UrbanFootprint enables you to target assistance to those who need it most.

Quantify and Map Current Eviction Risk

- Pinpoint and measure the number of households at risk of eviction in any community, with precision down to the census block group level
- Target neighborhoods and households in greatest need of rental assistance today using frequently updated, dynamic data*

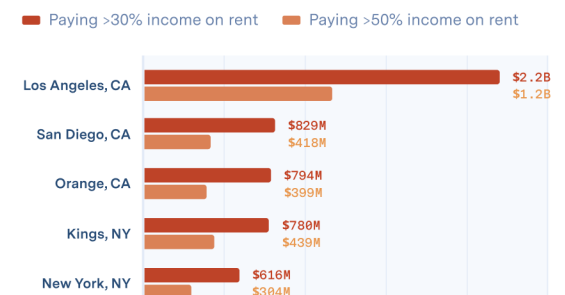

Target More Households in Need

- Conduct hyper-targeted outreach campaigns to reach the highest-risk households
- Identify communities with the highest concentration of rental assistance applications, and those with few applications in proportion to their need

Communicate with External Stakeholders

- Communicate progress towards strategic goals with customizable charts and maps
- Engage the public and community stakeholders with visually compelling storytelling
