T. B. Walker

TWIN CITY BUSINESS AND
CULTURAL LEADER
1840-1928

Strength of purpose and hard work shaped the remarkable life of Thomas Barlow (T.B.) Walker. Due to the death of his father when he was only 9 years old, T.B. quickly gained responsibility for the care of his family. He valued the power of education and always made time to read and study. He met his wife, Harriet Hulet, while studying for a term at Baldwin University in Ohio. T.B. excelled in mathematics and translated that advantage into a very successful and pioneering career in the lumber industry when the couple moved to Minneapolis. Together, they raised 8 children. Known as an honorable boss among his employees, primarily because he paid them fair and honest wages. T.B. was also an active member of his church and was philanthropic in the arts and social services. He gained a distinguished reputation as a civic-minded citizen because he was active in many projects related to the growth and development of the City of Minneapolis. TB was a founding member of the Minneapolis Library Board and served as president for 43 years. Known as an avid art collector, Walker built one of the largest private collections in the region, and allowed the public to see it free, which eventually became the Walker Art Center.
