

We have 2 homes for younger adults, offering long and short term residential care, rehabilitation and respite care. Many of our residents have physical disabilities or long term conditions, sometimes accompanied by visual or hearing impairment, acquired brain injury and cognitive or learning disabilities.

Our strong links with the local community encourage people to get involved in activities, helping them achieve their full potential and the benefits of living in a community.

Having their own pages for Life story and Favorites has been very successful, one gentleman stated he liked being able to put his pages together without anyone else seeing his work.

Every Service User is able to participate with the Technology, with varying degrees of support, and therefore regardless of ability everyone is included.

Thank you for your ongoing support and D is talking about the American Wrestling.

“ I wish you had been here on Tuesday and you could have seen the impact the Technology has had on our Service Users and Staff. They had the songs on and the staff were working with two Service Users with communication difficulties. The staff were really enthusiastic and were dancing as well as singing along. The laughter from the Service Users said it all, the session had to be extended because no one wanted it to end! ”

“ Whilst a service may be referred to as cost effective, in common usage, the term that typically embraces this is, economy, efficiency and effectiveness. If a service is concluded to be cost effective, this generally indicates that the good quality outcomes are required, have been delivered at an acceptable cost and have been capable of producing the outcomes required.

Service Users within the Field Studies detailed above, clearly demonstrated, engagement and were stimulated in such a way that they showed progressive improvement over a short period of time which represented a measurable outcome with the respective Service Users.

Stimulation of this type, may have the effect of reducing the level of resource care required in supporting a Service User. Whilst, at the same time, offering them choice and allowing them to build their own personal profiles through the content on the system, offering a person-centered approach to the delivery of their care.

Group Activities on the system could contribute towards a reduction in expenditure which may be incurred as a result of providing additional external activities. ”
