A Note to Students

Your myBlueprint account provides so much opportunity for customization and personalization. You have a hankering to do medium-hard Resolve questions with difficult language and cause-and-effect relationships? Click a few buttons in the Practice section, and feast your eyes on a set of oddly specific Logical Reasoning questions.

But maybe you're the type of person who likes to leave it up to the experts. You're the type of person who saddles up to the sushi bar and says, "Omakase" which translates to, roughly, "I leave it up to you, Chef. You decide what I'll be spending most of my last paycheck eating over the next few hours." You trust the chef to know what's the best for you, and you leave it up to them to decide.

If that's how you want to approach your homework on the LSAT, here are our recommended selections of what to do for both homework and extra practice. We'll tell you the order, the size of the sets, and whether to do them in Question-by-Question or Sprint mode. We'll make sure you're focusing on the things that matter most on the LSAT, and we'll guarantee you get to that all-important 2500 question goal. So, below, find Blueprint's Homework Omakase ... or Homeworkase.
