- Mabel Wilson, Chief Compliance Officer, Blackhawk Network

A Risk-Based Approach

Successfully managing risk faces two principle challenges:

1. Keeping up with the changing landscape and
2. Breaking down risk management silos that create gaps in management that can be exploited.

We know that risks are not created equal. Without proper prioritization, organizations are susceptible to missing risky blindspots as well as valuable opportunities.

Non-Risk-Based Approach

Inefficient use of resources • Critical risks are buried
No clarity around risk dependencies

LogicManager’s Advisory Analysts take a holistic, risk-based approach to ERM.

They’ll provide you with guidance that bridges organizational silos across all company departments, levels and vendors. This enables sound prioritization throughout your entire business - so you can allocate resources with confidence and achieve your business goals uninterrupted.

Risk-Based Approach

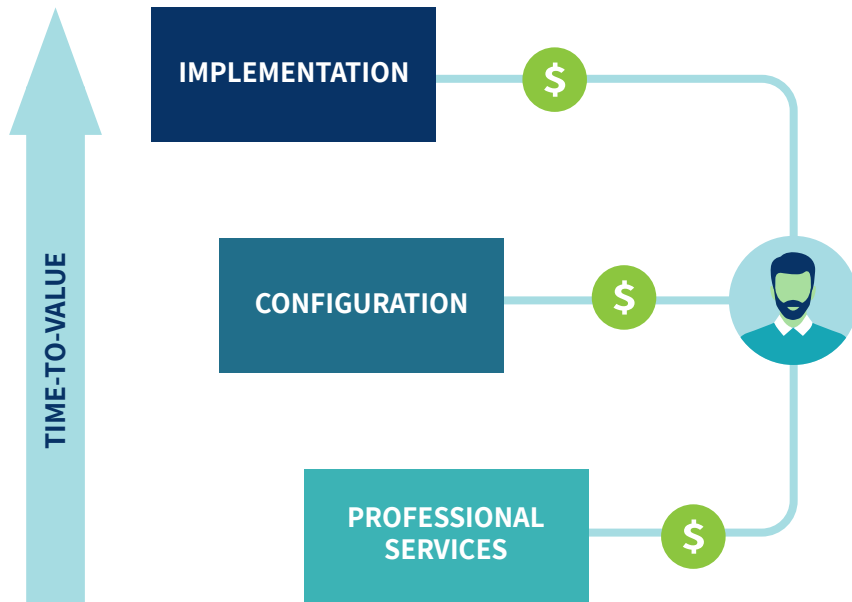

Risks prioritized by level of criticality • Resources are allocated efficiently
Complete oversight into the interconnectedness of risks

Holistic Risk Management Saves Time and Money

Typical GRC Platform

The typical GRC platform experience can be both fragmented and expensive.

- Separate implementation & configuration costs.
- Lack of connection to best practices and trends in an evolving risk landscape.
- Strategic advice requires outside professional consulting services.
- Consultants are disconnected from your data and platform experience, leading to time & money wasted on discovery.
- Consultancies rely heavily on nurturing a dependent relationship; keeping you tethered to them financially.

LogicManager's Service Model

Much like our approach to risk management, LogicManager's service model is holistic.

- Implementation, configuration and consulting services are not only intrinsically intertwined but also ongoing.
- Our support team is dedicated to understanding your organization as they are to knowing the LogicManager platform; from day one and beyond.
- Equipped to solve even the most complex challenges, minimize learning curves, and assist ERM initiatives as they mature over time.
- Use your success as a measure of our effectiveness.
- All at a fixed price!
