

Weekly Investment Update

October 18, 2021

Equity markets surged higher last week as earnings season got off to a great start. Several large banks reported strong earnings, which helped push equity markets higher. Goldman Sachs reported that their year-to-date revenue in 2021 is already the highest annual revenue recorded in firm history, and there is still a quarter of the year left.¹ The S&P 500 (a proxy for large-cap US stocks) was up 1.8% for the week and the MSCI ACWI index (a proxy for global large-cap stocks) jumped 2.2%.²

An important footnote to the strong bank earnings reports last week was the broad agreement by bank leadership that inflation, and wage inflation in particular, remains a concern. Goldman Sachs CEO David Solomon commented, “there’s real wage inflation across all aspects of the economy right now”.³

As one can see below, the US Consumer Price Index, a commonly used gauge of inflation, has risen to levels not seen in more than a decade. The Federal Reserve’s stance that inflation will be short-lived is being called into question more often recently, especially in areas like wage inflation.
